Each symbol on the map represents a school that used the museum's education services in FY2015.

The Walters Art Museum preserves and develops a distinguished collection of world art from antiquity to the 21st century. In 1931, the museum's founding benefactor, Henry Walters, bequeathed the core collection to the City of Baltimore "for the benefit of the public." Since its opening, the Walters has been a national leader in scholarship, conservation, and education, bringing art and people together for enjoyment, discovery, and learning.

Maps developed by the Association of Art Museum Directors. For more information on the mapping project, please contact Andy Finch, afinch@aamd.org 202-638-4530.

Mission:

The Walters Art Museum brings art and people together for enjoyment, discovery, and learning. We create a place where people of every background can be touched by art. We engage and strengthen our community by collecting, preserving and interpreting art.

Vision Statement:

The Walters is a transformative force in our region and inspires people to connect with each other through meaningful experiences with great works of art from across the globe and throughout time.

The Walters serves organizations and audiences across all socioeconomic levels. The map below shows Household Median Income by census tract, with the lightest areas representing the lowest income.

Walters Art Museum serves schools in all 14 city council districts.
Please see next page for detailed list.
